TITLE III—EFFECTIVE DATE

SEC. 301. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act, and the amendments made by this Act, take effect on October 1, 2002, or the date of the enactment of this Act, whichever occurs later.

PURPOSE

The purpose of H.R. 3839, the Keeping Children and Families Safe Act of 2002, is to reauthorize and make amendments to the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA), the Adoption Opportunities program, the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act, and the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA). The bill is aimed at preventing child abuse and family violence and protecting and treating abused and neglected children and victims of family violence. The bill also focuses on maintaining local projects with demonstrated value in eliminating barriers to permanent adoption and addressing the circumstances that often lead to child abandonment.

COMMITTEE ACTION

The Subcommittee on Select Education held two hearings in Washington, D.C., during the first session of the 107th Congress to review and hear comments on the reauthorization of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA), the Adoption Opportunities program, the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act, and the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA).

The first hearing was held on August 2, 2001, “CAPTA: Successes and Failures at Preventing Child Abuse and Neglect.” The purpose of the hearing was to review how CAPTA had been implemented and administered since the 1996 reauthorization, and to examine what had or had not worked in the prevention of child abuse and neglect.

The second hearing was held on October 17, 2001, “Prevention and Treatment of Child Abuse and Neglect: Policy Directions for the Future.” The purpose of the hearing was to more closely examine the issues and topics that arose during the first hearing in order to help the Subcommittee learn more about such issues as it began the reauthorization process.

LEGISLATIVE ACTION

On March 5, 2002, Representative Pete Hoekstra (R-MI) introduced H.R. 3839, the Keeping Children and Families Safe Act of 2002. H.R. 3839 reauthorizes and makes amendments to CAPTA, the Adoption Opportunities program, the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act, and FVPSA. H.R. 3839 was drafted on the basis of hearings, the recommendations of the Administration, the recommendations of the child abuse and family violence coalitions and community, and the recommendations of groups representing the interests of families.

The Subcommittee on Select Education considered H.R. 3839 in legislative session on March 6, 2002 during which three amendments were considered and adopted by voice vote. The Subcommittee on Select Education, with the majority of the Subcommittee present, favorably reported H.R. 3839, as amended, to the Full Committee by voice vote on March 6, 2002. The following is a description of the amendments adopted to H.R. 3839 during Subcommittee consideration:

- Mr. Hoekstra (R-MI) offered an amendment to improve upon the language in the introduced bill to require states to have provisions and procedures in place to require child protective services personnel to advise individuals subject to a child abuse and neglect investigation of the allegations before them consistent with the law protecting the rights of the informant.

- Ms. Davis (D-CA) offered an amendment to provide for a Sense of Congress that entities receiving CAPTA funding should ensure that limited English proficient children and families participating in CAPTA programs are provided materials and services under such programs in an appropriate language other than English.

- Mr. Greenwood (R-PA) offered an amendment to require states to have policies and procedures in place to address the needs of infants born with fetal alcohol syndrome or neonatal abstinence syndrome. States must require health care providers involved in the delivery of such infants to notify the child protective services system and develop a plan to address the needs of such infant and mother.

The Committee on Education and the Workforce considered H.R. 3839 in legislative session on March 20, 2002, during which the Committee considered and passed an amendment in the Nature of a Substitute by voice vote. The Committee on Education and the Workforce, with the majority of the Committee present, favorably reported H.R. 3839, as amended, to the House of Representatives by voice vote on March 20, 2002.

SUMMARY

TITLE I—CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION AND RELATED PROGRAMS

Subtitle A—Amendments to the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment ActChapter 1—General program

Chapter 1 of H.R. 3839 extends and modifies Title 1 of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA). Title I authorizes: grants to states to help states support their child protective services systems and requires states to submit certain data to the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS); funding for research and demonstration projects related to prevention of child abuse and neglect; grants to states to improve investigation and prosecution of child maltreatment; and authorizes HHS to operate a national clearinghouse of information related to child abuse and neglect. The bill makes clarifying and technical corrections; promotes partnerships between child protective services and private and community-based organizations to provide child abuse and neglect prevention and treatment services; requires the Secretary of HHS to conduct a study on the effectiveness of citizen review panels; requires states to provide for the development of a plan to address the needs of infants harmed by prenatal alcohol or drug exposure; instructs HHS to conduct the fourth National Incidence Study (NIS-4); and promotes the protection of individual rights by improving the training, recruitment and retention of child protective services personnel regarding their legal authority. It also requires such personnel to inform individuals of the allegations or complaints made against them. The bill also improves public education on the role of the child protection system and appropriate reporting of suspected incidents of child abuse and neglect to reduce the number of false or malicious allegations.

Title I is currently authorized at such sums. Title I State Grants received $22 million for FY 2002 and Discretionary Grants received $26 million for FY 2002. The bill authorizes Title I at $120 million for FY 2003 and such sums for FY 2004 through 2007.

Chapter 2—Community-based family resource and support grants

Chapter 2 of H.R. 3839 extends and modifies Title II of CAPTA. Title II authorizes grants to help establish and operate statewide networks of community-based, family support programs for the prevention of child abuse and neglect that coordinate a wide variety of resources within each state. The bill makes clarifying and technical changes to emphasize the prevention of child abuse and neglect before it occurs; promotes parent leadership to ensure that new parents receive appropriate parenting services, including parents of children with disabilities and parents with disabilities; and includes respite care, home visit and family support services as core family support programs for improving local programs in preventing child abuse and neglect.

Title II is currently authorized at such sums. Community-based grants received $33 million for FY 2002. The bill authorizes $80 million for FY 2003 and such sums for FY 2004 through 2007.

Subtitle B—Amendments to other child abuse prevention and related programs

Chapter 1—Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978

Chapter 1 of Subtitle B of H.R. 3839 extends and modifies Title II of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Reform Act of 1978 that authorizes the Adoption Opportunities program. The Adoption Opportunities program authorizes HHS to award funds to states and local public and private nonprofit agencies to promote quality standards for adoption services; pre-placement, post-placement, and post-legal adoption counseling, and standards to protect children's rights; maintain a national adoption information exchange system and conduct national recruitment efforts to reach prospective adoptive parents; and to assist state efforts for increasing the placement of foster care children legally free for adoption. The bill makes minor changes and requires the Secretary of HHS to conduct a study on the dynamics on successful adoptions.

The Adoption Opportunities program is currently authorized at such sums. It received $27 million for FY 2002. The bill authorizes $40 million for FY 2003 and such sums for FY 2004 through 2007.

Chapter 2—Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988

Chapter 2 of Subtitle B of H.R. 3839 extends and modifies the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988. The Abandoned Infants Assistance Act authorizes local programs (formerly called demonstration grants) to public and private nonprofit agencies for such activities as preventing the abandonment of infants; identifying and addressing the needs of abandoned infants; recruiting and training foster families for abandoned children; providing residential care for infants and young children who cannot live with their families or be placed in foster care; providing respite care for families and foster families; and recruiting and training health and social services personnel to work with abandoned children. The bill amends one of the priorities for provisions of services to local programs serving abandoned infants and young children who were perinatally exposed to HIV or are HIV-infected, or have a life-threatening illness or other special needs. The bill also requires the Secretary to conduct a study on the annual number of infants and young children who are victims of homicide; characteristics and demographics of parents who have abandoned an infant; and an estimate of the annual costs incurred by the federal government and by state and local governments in providing for the care of abandoned infants.

The Abandoned Infants Assistance Act is currently authorized at such sums. It received $12 million for FY 2002. The bill authorizes $45 million for FY 2003 and such sums for FY 2004 through 2007.

TITLE II—AMENDMENTS TO FAMILY VIOLENCE PREVENTION AND SERVICES ACT

Title II of H.R. 3839 reauthorizes and amends the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA). FVPSA authorizes assistance to states, Tribes and Tribal organizations to assist in efforts to increase public awareness about family violence and provide immediate shelter and related assistance to victims of family violence and their dependents. FVPSA was reauthorized with the Violence Against Women Act during the 106th Congress, however only a straight five year authorization was agreed to with no specific changes to the act. The bill makes minor and technical changes to the act and extends the reauthorization to coordinate with the reauthorization of CAPTA and its' related programs and act. The bill also extends the authorization for the transitional housing assistance program that awards grants to entities to provide transitional housing or housing assistance to victims and their dependents fleeing a domestic violence situation and for whom emergency shelter services are unavailable or insufficient.

Currently $175 million is authorized for state demonstration grants, technical assistance centers and state domestic violence coalitions through FY 2005. The national domestic hotline is authorized at $2 million through FY 2005, the community initiative grants are authorized at $6 million through FY 2005, and the transitional housing assistance program is authorized at $25 million for FY 2001.

FVPSA received $2 million for its Domestic Violence Hotline program and $125 million for state demonstration grants, technical assistance centers and state domestic violence coalitions (including Battered Women's Shelters) for FY 2002. The community initiative grants received $5.9 million for FY 2002. The transitional housing assistance program did not receive funding.

COMMITTEE VIEWS

According to the most recent Child Maltreatment Report, each year an estimated 3 million reports of possible child maltreatment are made to child protective services. Approximately 60 percent of these reports were investigated and 826,000 children were estimated to have been victims of child abuse or neglect in 1999. Of these victims, 58 percent suffered neglect, 21 percent suffered physical abuse and 11 percent were sexually abused.

While the overall number of confirmed cases represents a continuation of a downward trend since 1993, the long-term trend in child abuse reporting has been one of substantial growth, with the number of maltreatment reports more than quadrupling since 1976. However, it should be noted that increased reporting does not necessarily mean an equivalent increase in actual cases of abuse and neglect. The number of reported child abuse cases is likely higher due to improved reporting mechanisms and greater awareness of the problem of child abuse and neglect. Despite progress made in promoting child abuse awareness, and the endless efforts made to prevent child abuse and neglect, much more work is needed to prevent and treat child abuse and neglect.

Family violence also continues to be the most common, yet least reported, crime in our nation. Approximately, 95 percent of family violence victims are women, and it is estimated that every 11 seconds a woman is battered in the United States. It is also estimated that 70 percent of men who abuse their wives also abuse their children, and children from abusive homes are at greater risk of alcohol or drug abuse, juvenile delinquency, and depression and suicide.

In addition, caseworker training, supervision and case management continue to be important areas of improvement for child pro-protective services systems. Research has shown that child abuse caseworkers lack adequate resources and are often in charge of more cases than they can realistically handle. Caseworker skill, training, and workload are critical components to delivery of appropriate investigations, prevention and intervention, treatment services, and case management.

The Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA) was established in 1974 to create a focal point within the federal government to identify and address the issues of child abuse and neglect, and to support effective methods of prevention and treatment. CAPTA was last reauthorized in 1996 and expired at the end of fiscal year 2001.

The last reauthorization in 1996 made significant changes to CAPTA to better target federal abuse and neglect prevention resources, enhance the ability of states to respond to actual cases of abuse and neglect, and to consolidate and coordinate federal data collection efforts in order to gain a better perspective on the trends of child abuse and neglect and find effective methods of prevention and treatment efforts. H.R. 3839 builds upon the reforms made during the 1996 reauthorization to improve program implementation and make improvements to current law to ensure that states have the necessary resources and flexibility to properly address issues of child abuse and neglect and family violence. The changes in H.R. 3839 also serve to assist states in improving their child protective services systems and enhance the federal government's role in providing support for the child protective services system infrastructure to correct any imbalance in the federal government's response to child abuse and neglect.

Promoting improved services

One recurring theme the Subcommittee heard during the hearings on CAPTA was the need to expand upon current law activities of the child protective services system and the need to ensure that states have the necessary resources and data to address the issues of child abuse and neglect. Currently, CAPTA requires the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to conduct an interdisciplinary research program to provide information that could improve child protection and the well being of children who have been abused or neglected. HHS is also required to operate a national clearinghouse for information on child abuse and neglect. Both of these resources provide states with important data to assist them in addressing the issues of child abuse and neglect.

In order to build upon existing data and focus research on more current topics, the Committee made several modifications to current law. These changes promote the collection and dissemination of information to help all states improve upon their current systems. H.R. 3839 requires the national clearinghouse to collect and disseminate information that describes the best practices being used throughout the nation for making appropriate referrals. The bill also requires the Secretary to conduct research on a variety of topics, including state child protective services systems improvement, effective approaches to interagency collaboration between the child protective services system and the juvenile justice system, and redundancies and gaps in services in the field of child abuse and neglect prevention in order to make better use of limited federal resources.

CAPTA also currently permits the Secretary to conduct time-limited demonstration programs and projects for such matters as training professional and paraprofessional staff, recruiting and training of volunteers, and establishing resource centers for providing information and training related to child abuse and neglect. H.R. 3839 expands these opportunities to include training to support the enhancement of linkages between child protective service agencies and health care agencies to improve forensic diagnosis and health evaluations; and to support innovative partnerships between child protective service agencies and health care agencies that offer creative approaches to using existing federal, state, local, and private funding to meet the health evaluation needs of children who have been subjects of substantiated cases of child abuse and neglect.

The Secretary may also grant awards to private nonprofit organizations to establish and maintain mutual support and self-help programs as a means of strengthening families in partnership with their communities. Current law makes a specific reference to the group Parents Anonymous as an example of the types of organizations that would benefit from such grants. Parents Anonymous is a national self-help organization dedicated to community outreach for the prevention of child abuse and neglect. While recognized as a successful organization, the Committee believes that no single group or organization should receive special recognition in federal statute. As such, H.R. 3839 strikes this specific reference to Parents Anonymous in order to create a level playing field for other similar programs and organizations that do not enjoy this special recognition. However, striking the reference to Parents Anonymous in no way implies that the Committee does not recognize and support the efforts and work of Parents Anonymous. The Committee also wants to encourage the Secretary to continue to award grants to organizations that operate programs that incorporate quality standards and demonstrate effectiveness in their efforts in preventing child abuse and neglect.

H.R. 3839 further builds upon the theme of improving state child protective services systems by allowing states to use their CAPTA dollars to promote partnerships between public agencies and community-based organizations to provide child abuse and neglect prevention and treatment services, and by supporting and enhancing interagency collaboration between child protective service systems and the juvenile justice system for improved delivery of services and treatment, including methods of continuity of treatment and services as children transition between such systems.

The bill also improves the training of child protective services personnel to ensure that they are knowledgeable in best practices for promoting collaboration with families and that they are fully aware of the extent and limits of their legal authority and the legal rights of parents in carrying out such investigations. H.R. 3839 requires that states have provisions in place that address the training of child protective services personnel in their legal duties, which may consist of procedures to inform such personnel of such duties, in order to protect the legal rights of children and families.

In addition, the Committee wanted to ensure that state child protective service agencies were operating effectively and serving the needs of their community. As part of the 1996 reauthorization, states were required to establish citizen review panels composed of volunteer community representatives to examine and evaluate the policies and procedures of state and local child protective services agency activities. To ensure that these review panels are fulfilling their mission, H.R. 3839 requires the Secretary to conduct a study by random sample on the effectiveness of citizen review panels and report its findings to the appropriate Committees of Congress.

Fourth National Incidence Study

The National Incidence Study (NIS) is the single most comprehensive source of information about the current rate of child abuse and neglect in the United States. The last NIS study was conducted from 1993 to 1996. It provided key updates on the estimates on the incidence of child abuse and neglect in the United States and measured changes in such incidence from earlier studies. H.R. 3839 instructs the Secretary to conduct the fourth NIS and report its findings to the appropriate Committees of Congress within four years. The Committee believes that it is necessary to obtain the most updated information on the national incidence of child abuse and neglect in order to continue to monitor trends on the occurrence of child maltreatment in the United States and to review what is or is not working in the prevention of child abuse and neglect efforts. The Committee also is interested in reviewing the incidence and prevalence of child maltreatment as it relates to family structure (including the living arrangement of the resident parent), family income, and family size. The Committee feels this information is important in order to review and monitor the conditions that lead to incidents of child abuse and neglect and to help monitor other services that may be needed in the future to ensure that the needs of children at risk for abuse and neglect are met.

Protecting individual rights

During the hearings on CAPTA, the Subcommittee heard concerns about the number of parents being falsely accused of child abuse and neglect and the aggressiveness of child protective services personnel in their investigations of alleged child abuse. Mr. Christopher Klicka of the Home School Legal Defense Association described numerous cases of innocent families being aggressively investigated on allegations of child abuse and neglect only to have such cases later determined to be unsubstantiated or false. In his testimony describing a conversation with a former social worker, Mr. Klicka stated, "In the old days, social workers tried to prove a reported family was innocent and considered the family innocent until proven guilty. Now the system operates on the principle that a family is guilty * * * period."

The Committee looked carefully for ways to ensure that the individual rights of parents being investigated on allegations of child abuse or neglect were protected, while not compromising the intent of the child protective services system—to ensure that the best interest of the child is the primary focus. To that end the Committee wanted to enhance the training of child protective services personnel to ensure that they are knowledgeable in best practices for promoting collaboration with families and that they are fully aware of the extent and limits of their legal authority and the legal rights of parents in carrying out such investigations. H.R. 3839 requires that states have provisions in place that address the training of child protective services personnel in their legal duties, which may consist of procedures to inform such personnel of such duties, in order to protect the constitutional and statutory rights of children and families. For instance, the Committee believes that child protective services personnel should understand that they don't have the authority to demand entry in the family home when investigating an allegation.

The bill also permits states to use their CAPTA dollars to develop and deliver information related to improving public education on the role and responsibilities of the child protective services system and the proper and appropriate basis for reporting suspected incidents of child abuse and neglect. It is the hope of the Committee that by requiring states to improve the training of social workers in proper and appropriate investigating techniques, and provide more education on appropriate reporting of child abuse and neglect by the public that incidents of aggressive investigating behavior and incidents of false reports of child maltreatment cases will be significantly decreased.

The Committee also heard concerns about how most of these families were never informed of the specific allegations made against them in the first place. The Committee firmly believes that individuals being investigated for alleged child maltreatment should be informed of the specific allegations made against them. H.R. 3839 addresses this issue by requiring states to have policies and procedures in place to require social workers, at the initial time of contact, to advise individuals who are subject to a child abuse and neglect investigation of the complaints or allegations made against them. However, it is not the intent of the Committee that by requiring states to have such policies and procedures in place that such advisement be too descriptive as to inadvertently provide identifying information that may reveal the source of such allegation or complaint. The bill specifically states that such advisement be in a manner that is consistent with laws protecting the rights of the informant.

In addition, the Committee wants to ensure that individual rights are protected by giving individuals who have been subject to a child abuse and neglect investigation an opportunity to be heard when they feel they have been wrongfully accused or have been the subject of an overly aggressive child maltreatment investigation. H.R. 3839 requires citizen review panels to provide for public outreach and comment in order to help states assess the impact of the procedures and practices of their child protective services system upon the children, families, and individuals in the community.

Protecting infants born addicted to substances

As the Subcommittee began reviewing issues and concerns surrounding the reauthorization of CAPTA one issue that arose was how to protect and deal with infants born and identified with fetal alcohol effects, fetal alcohol syndrome, neonatal intoxication or withdrawal syndrome, or neonatal physical or neurological harm resulting from prenatal drug exposure. Congressman Greenwood offered an amendment during Subcommittee consideration to address this issue. As a former caseworker and state legislator, Congressman Greenwood has spent countless hours looking for ways to assure proper treatment for infants who have been harmed by alcohol and/or other drug exposure in utero. During a Subcommittee hearing held last year, Congressman Greenwood described his ideas and attempts to require that states have some sort of reporting requirements to child protective services for when infants are born addicted to drugs or alcohol. He also spoke of requiring the child protective services agency to develop a safe plan of care for the infant. Currently, only 12 states and the District of Columbia have some form of specific reporting criteria and procedures relating to drug-exposed infants.

This issue also received attention in the fall of 2001 when the Washington Post ran a series of articles describing several infants born addicted to drugs or alcohol in the District of Columbia who died from lack of care by the mother or supervision from the city's child protective services agency—even when the agency was aware of the child's and family's fragile condition. According to one article, eleven drug-exposed or medically frail newborns in D.C. died from 1993 through 2000 after they were released to parents whose addictions and circumstances were well-documented by hospitals and social workers. The article stated: "The babies got lost in a system where no one assumes direct responsibility for them."

In some instances where the child protective services agency was properly notified, the agency failed to respond to the hospital's calls, leaving fragile infants in the hands of parents who were ill-equipped to care for them. The article continued to describe numerous other cases with the same results. A committee formed to investigate the District's policies regarding infants born drug-exposed or addicted to drugs or alcohol concluded, "There are no standards, policies, procedures, or consistent practices for dealing with substance abuse mothers, especially of newborns addicted to drugs."

Congressman Greenwood's amendment requires states, as a condition of receiving CAPTA dollars, to have policies and procedures in place to address the needs of infants born with fetal alcohol effects, fetal alcohol syndrome, neonatal intoxication or withdrawal syndrome, or neonatal physical or neurological harm resulting from prenatal drug exposure. Under the amendment, health care providers involved in the delivery of such infants would be required to notify the child protective services system of such occurrence and a safe plan of care for the infant, including providing services to the mother would be required. The amendment passed the Subcommittee by voice vote and a slightly amended version passed in the Full Committee in the substitute amendment. The Committee wants to be clear that the final language does not create any new or amended definition of child abuse. Neither is it the intent of this language to address any legal prosecution of mothers. The goal of this language is to identify infants at risk of child abuse and neglect so appropriate services can be delivered to the infant and mother to provide for the safety of the child. The Committee also wants to be clear that the amendment does not preempt a state's law regarding what constitutes child abuse or requires prosecution. For instance, states that choose to prosecute women who have given birth to infants addicted to drugs or alcohol may continue to do so. The language included in H.R. 3839 only requires states to have policies and procedures in place to address a safe plan of care for the infant.

Improved collaboration for improved prevention and treatment services

To prevent gaps in needed services, the bill requires the state child welfare system to develop policies and procedures for the referral of abused or neglected children under the age of 3 to the statewide early intervention system funded under Part C of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. Such policies and procedures will ensure that abused children can access any Part C early intervention services and supports for which they are eligible. Such services will help these children learn, grow and thus enter school ready to learn.

Related to this issue is the importance of health screenings and treatment for children who are victims of child abuse and neglect. Appropriate health and developmental evaluations and treatment can greatly influence healthy child development and can affect treatment and family preservation, such as preventing the need for out-of-home placements. H.R. 3839 takes many steps to help states address this problem and improve services for victims of child abuse and neglect by promoting linkages between child protection and health care (including mental health) agencies.

H.R. 3839 also promotes collaboration between the child protection system and the juvenile justice system as an important component in the prevention and treatment of child abuse. Research consistently demonstrates that child maltreatment greatly increases the risk of juvenile delinquency and criminal behavior. A study by the National Institute of Justice concluded that being abused or neglected as a child increased the likelihood of arrest as a juvenile by 59 percent and for a violent crime by 29 percent. Thus, many children under the care and supervision of child protection services will come to the attention or custody of the juvenile justice system. Yet social workers, judges, probation officers, researchers and others suggests there is little communication or collaboration between child protection and juvenile justice systems.

Enhanced collaboration between these two systems is needed if children are to receive appropriate treatment for child abuse and neglect. Continuity in services for abused and neglected youth is an essential component to the treatment of child maltreatment, and therefore enhanced collaboration between representatives and procedures of the child protection systems and juvenile justice systems is an essential part of federal, state and local attempts to treat child abuse. H.R. 3839 supports better treatment services to victims of child abuse and neglect by encouraging research and allowing operation grants on effective approaches to interagency collaboration that improve the delivery of services and treatment.

The Adoption Opportunities Program

The Adoption Opportunities Program was created to help eliminate barriers to adoption and to facilitate the acquisition of permanent homes for children who would benefit from adoption, particularly children with special needs and disabled infants with life-threatening conditions. The Adoption Opportunities Program provides grants to public and non-profit agencies to: promote quality standards for adoption services, pre- and post-placement, and post-legal adoption counseling, and standards to protect children's rights. The program also authorizes a national adoption information exchange system and national recruitment efforts to reach prospective adoptive parents.

H.R. 3839 makes minor modifications to the Adoption Opportunities program and requires the Secretary to conduct a study on the dynamics of successful adoptions. The Committee recognizes the lack of research about the dynamics of successful adoptions and supports the need for such research in order to fill this gap and provide better information on adoption.

The Abandoned Infants Assistance Act

The Abandoned Infants Act provides grants to public and non-profit agencies that design and implement demonstration projects to address this problem. Specific activities include: preventing the abandonment of infants, identifying and addressing the needs of abandoned infants, recruiting and training foster families for abandoned children, providing residential care for infants and young children who cannot live with their families or who are awaiting placement in foster care, providing respite care for families and foster families, and recruiting and training health and social services personnel to work with abandoned children. Priority for services is given to children who were perinatally exposed to HIV or HIV-infected, or were perinatally exposed to dangerous drugs.

As noted, the current Abandoned Infants Assistance Act places a priority on services for abandoned infants and young children born infected with or exposed to HIV or perinatally exposed to dangerous drugs. H.R. 3839 includes language that broadens one of the two priorities. The bill maintains the program's commitment to serving infants born infected with or exposed to the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) and then broadens this priority to recognize abandoned infants and young children born with other serious medical conditions. The act's other priority—abandoned infants and young children perinatally exposed to drugs—remains unchanged.

The Committee fully supports the discretion of the Secretary to continue its priority to fund local programs that serve infants whose mothers are infected with HIV/AIDS or are addicted to illicit drugs, because at the present time drug use and HIV/AIDS are the leading factors resulting in infant abandonment. However, the Committee acknowledges that over time other factors may become more prevalent predictors of infant abandonment.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA) authorizes assistance to states, Tribes and Tribal organizations to assist in efforts to increase public awareness about family violence and provide immediate shelter and related assistance to victims of family violence and their dependents.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA) was reauthorized along with the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) during the 106th Congress, however, at that time only a straight five year authorization was agreed to and no significant changes were made. Traditionally, FVPSA is reauthorized along with CAPTA and its' related programs and acts. As such, H.R. 3839 extends the authorization and makes minor modifications to FVPSA to coordinate with the reauthorization of CAPTA. H.R. 3839 does not make changes to VAWA. In addition, FVPSA (as reauthorized under VAWA) authorized the transitional housing assistance program for only one year. The transitional housing assistance program awards grants to entities that provide transitional housing or housing assistance to victims and their dependents fleeing a domestic violence situation and for whom emergency shelter services are unavailable or insufficient. The Committee recognizes the importance of the transitional housing assistance program in helping domestic violence victims find a permanent, safe, secure and stable living situations. The Committee further recognizes that far too often, because of programmatic and funding constraints, the permissible length of stay in emergency shelters for those fleeing a domestic violence situation does not always provide enough time for victims to begin the task of restoring order to their lives. H.R. 3839 extends the authorization for the transitional housing assistance program through FY 2007.

APPLICATION OF LAW TO THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

Section 102(b)(3) of Public Law 104–1 requires a description of the application of this bill to the legislative branch. The purpose of H.R. 3839 is to reauthorize and make amendments to the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA), the Adoption Opportunities program, the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act, and the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA). The bill does not prevent legislative branch employees from receiving the benefits of this legislation.

UNFUNDED MANDATE STATEMENT

Section 423 of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act (as amended by Section 101(a)(2) of the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act, P.L. 104-4) requires a statement of whether the provisions of the reported bill include unfunded mandates. H.R. 3839 reauthorizes and makes amendments to the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA), the Adoption Opportunities program, the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act, and the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA). As such, the bill does not contain any unfunded mandates.

STATEMENT OF OVERSIGHT FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE COMMITTEE

In compliance with clause 3(c)(1) of rule XIII and clause (2)(b)(1) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee's oversight findings and recommendations are reflected in the body of this report.

NEW BUDGET AUTHORITY AND CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

With respect to the requirements of clause 3(c)(2) of rule XIII of the House of Representatives and section 308(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and with respect to requirements of 3(c)(3) of rule XIII of the House of Representatives and section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the Committee has received the following cost estimate for H.R. 3839 from the Director of the Congressional Budget Office:

H.R. 3839—Keeping Children and Families Safe Act of 2002

tion Reform Act of 1978, and the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988 were authorized through 2001. These programs were continued in 2002 by the Department of Health and Human Services Appropriations Act, 2002. H.R. 3839 would reauthorize these programs through 2007. It also would extend authorizations through 2007 for some programs authorized under the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act. Most programs under that act are currently authorized through 2005.

The bill would authorize total appropriations of $312 million in 2003. CBO estimates that total authorizations under H.R. 3839 would amount to about $2 billion over the 2003–2007 period, assuming that annual levels are adjusted to keep pace with inflation when specific annual authorizations are not provided. (Without such inflation adjustments, the authorization total would be about $1.9 billion over the 2003–2007 period.) CBO estimates that appropriations of the authorized levels would result in additional outlays of $1.2 billion over the 2003–2007 period, if inflation adjustments are included.

Enacting the bill would not affect direct spending or receipts; therefore, pay-as-you-go procedures would not apply. H.R. 3839 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA) and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments.

Estimated Cost to the Federal Government: The estimated budgetary impact of H.R. 3839 is shown in Table 1. The costs of this legislation fall within budget function 500 (education, training, employment, and social services).

¹ The 2002 level is the amount appropriated for that year for programs authorized under the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, the Child Abuse Prevention, Treatment, and Adoption Reform Act of 1978, the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988, and the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act. The amounts shown for 2003 through 2005 are current authorization levels for certain programs under the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act.

Note.—Components may not sum totals because of rounding.

Basis of estimate

H.R. 3839 would authorize funding through 2007 for various programs created under the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, the Child Abuse Prevention, Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978, the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988, and the Family Violence Prevention Services Act. Programs authorized under the first three acts would be reauthorized at specific levels for 2003 and for such sums as may be necessary for 2004 through 2007. Programs authorized by the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act, most of which are already authorized through 2005, would be extended at current levels through 2007.

H.R. 3839 would authorize the appropriation of $312 million in 2003. CBO estimates that this bill would authorize total funding of $2 billion over the 2003–2007 period assuming that “such sums” amounts provided after 2003 are adjusted for inflation. If the authorized amounts are appropriated, outlays would increase by $33 million in the first year and by $1.2 billion over the five-year period.

Table 2 presents CBO’s estimates with inflation adjustments for the various components of each title under H.R. 3839. Unless annual amounts are specified, CBO’s estimate of authorized levels is the authorized amount for 2003 with those amounts inflated in later years. The estimated outlays reflect historical rates of spending for the affected programs.

Title I—Child abuse prevention and related programs

Title I of H.R. 3839 would reauthorize and revise programs currently authorized under the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, the Child Abuse Prevention, Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978, and the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988. H.R. 3839 would authorize a total of $287 million for 2003 for all programs under title I. CBO estimates the total funding for title I for the 2003–2007 period would be about $1.5 billion, assuming adjustments for inflation, with resulting outlays of $950 million over those five years.

Child Abuse Prevention Programs. H.R. 3839 would authorize $120 million in 2003 for both the Child Abuse and Neglect State Grant program and the Child Abuse Discretionary Activities program and such sums as may be necessary in 2004 through 2007. The state grant program provides formula grants to states to improve child protection services. The discretionary activities program awards funds to other public agencies or private nonprofit agencies for research and demonstration projects. The two programs were funded at $48 million in 2002.

The bill also would amend provisions to include new reporting and training requirements and would encourage collaborative partnerships between organizations within a state.

The 2003–2005 amounts are current authorization levels for certain programs under the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act.

² The Family Violence Prevention and Services, Domestic Violence Hotline, and Demonstration Grants for Community Initiatives programs are currently authorized until 2005. Table 2 shows only new authorizations. See text for a description of authorizations.

Notes.—Components may not sum to totals because of rounding.

Community Based Resource Centers. H.R. 3839 also would authorize $80 million in 2003 and such sums as may be necessary over the 2004–2007 period for grants to help states expand the network of services and coordination of services within the state. The program is funded at $33 million in 2002.

Adoption Opportunities. The bill would authorize $40 million in 2003 and such sums as may be necessary over the 2004–2007 period for the adoption opportunities program. The adoption opportunities program provides funds to organizations for programs to eliminate barriers to adoption. Projects include the creation of a national adoption exchange system, legal services programs, and programs to increase the adoption rates of minority children. These activities are funded at $27 million in 2002.

Abandoned Infants Assistance. H.R. 3839 would authorize $45 million in 2003 and such sums as may be necessary for the next four fiscal years for the Abandoned Infants Assistance program. That program provides funds to public and private organizations for programs that prevent abandonment of infants with HIV/AIDS, assist abandoned infants, and recruit and train foster parents and health and social services professionals. The bill also would authorize about $2 million in each fiscal year for administrative expenses. The program is funded at $12 million in 2002.

Title II—Other child abuse prevention and related programs

Title II would authorize $25 million in 2003 and $491 million over the 2003–2007 period for four family violence prevention programs that are currently authorized under the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act. The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act already authorizes most of these appropriations through 2005, and this bill would extend the authorizations through 2007.

Family Violence Prevention and Services/Battered Women's Shelters. The bill would extend the authorization of the Family Violence Prevention and Services/Battered Women's Shelter program from 2005 through 2007. The program provides grants to states to provide shelter and assistance for victims, and preventive services for perpetrators of domestic violence. The current authorization is $175 million annually through 2005. The program is funded at $124 million in 2002.

Domestic Violence Hotline. H.R. 3839 would authorize $2 million in each of the years 2006 and 2007 for the National Domestic Violence hotline. The hotline is a national toll-free telephone hotline that provides information and assistance to victims of domestic violence throughout the United States. The program is currently authorized at $2 million annually through 2005 by the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act. The program received $2 million in 2002.

Demonstration Grants for Community Initiatives. The bill would extend the authorization for grants for community initiatives through 2007. The program awards grants to nonprofit organizations to coordinate domestic violence intervention and prevention programs in local communities. The program is currently authorized at $6 million annually through 2005 and is funded at $6 million in 2002.

Transitional Housing Assistance. H.R. 3839 would authorize $25 million in each of the fiscal years 2003 through 2007 for housing assistance for victims of domestic violence. The program was authorized at $25 million for 2001, but the program has never been funded.

Pay as you go considerations: None.

Estimated impact on state, local, and tribal governments: H.R. 3839 contains no intergovernmental mandates as defined in UMRA and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments. This bill would benefit state, local, and tribal governments by authorizing at least $300 million in grants to prevent child abuse and family violence as well as to protect abused and neglected children. Any costs incurred to apply for or administer grants would be voluntary.

Estimated impact on the private sector: The bill contains no private-sector mandates as defined in UMRA.

Estimate prepared by: Federal Costs: Donna Wong; Impact on State, Local, and Tribal Governments: Elyse Goldman; Impact on the Private Sector: Kate Bloniarz.

Estimate approved by: Peter H. Fontaine, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

STATEMENT OF GENERAL PERFORMANCE GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

In accordance with Clause (3)(c) of House Rule XIII, the goal of H.R. 3839 is to authorize federal assistance helping to prevent child abuse and family violence and protecting and treating abused and neglected children and victims of family violence. The bill also focuses on maintaining local projects with demonstrated value in eliminating barriers to permanent adoption and addressing the circumstances that often lead to child abandonment. The Committee expects the administering federal agencies to comply with H.R. 3839 and implement the changes to the law in accordance with the changes.

CONSTITUTIONAL AUTHORITY STATEMENT

Under clause 3(d)(1) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee must include a statement citing the specific powers granted to Congress in the Constitution to enact the law proposed by H.R. 3839. The Committee believes that the amendments made by this bill, which authorize appropriations for the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA), the Adoption Opportunities program, the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act, and the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA), are within Congress' authority under Article I, section 8, clause 1 of the Constitution.

COMMITTEE ESTIMATE

Clauses 3(d)(2) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives requires an estimate and a comparison by the Committee of the costs that would be incurred in carrying out H.R. 3839. However, clause 3(d)(3)(B) of that rule provides that this requirement does not apply when the Committee has included in its report a timely submitted cost estimate of the bill prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office under section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act.

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW MADE BY THE BILL, AS REPORTED

In compliance with clause 3(e) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, changes in existing law made by the bill, as reported, are shown as follows (existing law proposed to be omitted is enclosed in black brackets, new matter is printed in italic, existing law in which no change is proposed is shown in roman):

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

[(1) the number of children in substitute care increased by nearly 61 percent between 1986 and 1994, as our Nation’s foster care population included more than 452,000 as of June 1994;]

[(2) increasingly] (1) children entering foster care have complex problems [which] that require intensive services;

[(9)] (7) there are qualified persons seeking to adopt such children who are unable to do so because of barriers to their placement; and

[(10)] (8) in order both to enhance the stability and love of the child's home environment and to avoid wasteful expenditures of public funds, such children should not have medically indicated treatment withheld from them nor be maintained in foster care or institutions when adoption is appropriate and families can be found for such children.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of [this title] this subtitle to facilitate the elimination of barriers to adoption and to provide permanent and loving home environments for children who would benefit from adoption, particularly children with special needs, including disabled infants with life-threatening conditions, by providing a mechanism to—

ABANDONED INFANTS ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1988

[SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

[This Act may be cited as the “Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988”.]

SEC. [2.] 222. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

[(1) throughout the Nation, the number of infants and young children who have been exposed to drugs taken by their mothers during pregnancy has increased dramatically;]

[(2)] (1) studies indicate that a number of factors contribute to the inability of some parents [who abuse drugs] to provide adequate [care for such infants] care for their infants and young children and a lack of suitable shelter homes for such infants and young children have led to the abandonment of such infants and young children in hospitals for extended periods;

[(3)] (2) an unacceptable number of these infants and young children will be medically cleared for discharge, yet remain in hospitals as boarder babies;

[(4)] (3) hospital-based child care for these infants and young children is extremely costly and deprives them of an adequate nurturing environment;

[(5) training is inadequate for foster care personnel working with medically fragile infants and young children and infants and young children exposed to drugs;

[(6) a particularly devastating development is the increase in the number of infants and young children who are infected with the human immunodeficiency virus (which is believed to cause acquired immune deficiency syndrome and which is commonly known as HIV) or who have been perinatally exposed to the virus or to a dangerous drug;

[(7) many such infants and young children have at least one parent who is an intravenous drug abuser;]

(4) appropriate training is needed for personnel working with infants and young children with life-threatening conditions and other special needs, including those who are infected with the human immunodeficiency virus (commonly known as "HIV"), those who have acquired immune deficiency syndrome (commonly known as "AIDS"), and those who have been exposed to dangerous drugs;

[(8)] (5) such infants and young children are particularly difficult to place in foster homes, and are being abandoned in hospitals in increasing numbers by mothers dying of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, by parents abusing drugs, or by parents incapable of providing adequate care;

[(9)] (6) there is a need for [comprehensive services for such infants and young children, including foster family care services, case management services, family support services, respite and crisis intervention services, counseling services, and group residential home services;] comprehensive support services for such infants and young children and their families and services to prevent the abandonment of such infants and young children, including foster care services, case management services, family support services, respite and crisis intervention services, counseling services, and group residential home services; and

[(10)] there is a need to support the families of such infants and young children through the provision of services that will prevent the abandonment of the infants and children; and

[(11)] there is a need for the development of funding strategies that coordinate and make the optimal use of all private resources, and Federal, State, and local resources, to establish and maintain such services.]

(7) Private, Federal, State, and local resources should be coordinated to establish and maintain such services and to ensure the optimal use of all such resources.

ADDITIONAL MINORITY VIEWS

Protecting children from harm

When asked about the balance between protecting children and protecting “parents’ rights” in a Subcommittee hearing on October 17, 2001. Assistant Secretary of HHS, Wade Horn, responded that a delicate balance was necessary and that within the context of CAPTA, “the balance was adequate.”

Despite Dr. Horn’s expressed satisfaction on this issue, the Majority insisted on pursuing the matter within CAPTA reauthorization. Based on individual case studies, the Majority seems to believe that child protective systems routinely and aggressively personnel ignore “parental rights” in investigating potential cases of child abuse or neglect. However, evidence for this assertion is lacking.

Moreover, the Minority is greatly concerned that more child abuse and child deaths could result with inappropriate emphasis on protecting the “rights” of parents over the rights of children not to be abused, neglected or murdered. The Minority believes that improved caseworker training and oversight is critically important to the safety of our country’s children and the well-being of our country’s families, and that the appropriate way to address the Majority’s concerns is through more resources for training and case management of child protective service personnel rather than prescriptive declarations from the federal government about what caseworkers should or should not say in their investigations of child abuse and neglect. The Minority believes greater emphasis should be placed on supporting best practices to ensure the safety of children and promote collaboration between the child protective services and the families where appropriate from the beginning of the investigation through treatment.

In an effort to negotiate a bipartisan bill, the Minority worked with the Majority to develop language that might address the Majority’s wishes without compromising the safety of children. The result of the complicated and contentious negotiations was an agreement on a provision which requires states to have policies and procedures that require social workers, at the initial time of contact, to advise an individual who are the subject to a child abuse and neglect investigation, of the complaints or allegations made against them. The agreed upon goal of this provision is for caseworkers to inform individuals being investigated for child maltreatment of the types of allegation being made.

Child protective service personnel are currently trained to disclose whether a parent (for example) is suspected of physical abuse versus sexual abuse versus neglect. The agreed upon provisions clarifies existing practice. However, the Minority firmly opposes broader or more prescriptive interpretation of this provision. We believe that federally legislating prescriptive restrictions on what these personnel are allowed to say or do during investigations could greatly compromise the rights and safety of children. It was not the intent of Minority, nor was it the agreed upon intent of the Majority, for this provision to lead to caseworkers revealing information that could advertently or inadvertently provide identifying information that may reveal the source of such allegation or compromise the investigation. And importantly, the Minority would like to emphasize that this provision does not require or suggest that caseworkers should or must convey any information that could compromise the safety of the child.

We believe that the Majority's report on the reauthorization of CAPTA overemphasizes the extent to which parental rights are violated or inappropriately treated within the child protective system, misrepresents the frequency in which this happens and the extent empirical evidence on this issue, goes beyond the agreed upon intent within our negotiations, and thus does not represent the Minority's views. We know of no valid, scientifically sound studies and no data to suggest widespread inappropriately "aggressive" investigations by child protective services personnel. In fact, discussions with practitioners and recognized experts in the field of child welfare contradict the claim that parental rights are frequently violated by child protective service systems. In sum, we believe the views expressed in the report's "Protecting Individual Rights" section go beyond the agreed upon intent of the relevant provisions of CAPTA, distort what is known about this issue, defy model professional practice, and could potentially detrimentally tip the balance, referred to by Dr. Horn, in a manner that would lead to greater harm to children.

Improving child protective services for children with disabilities and health problems

There are approximately three million reports of child abuse every year. Of these 3 million, 1 million are substantiated. It is estimated that children with disabilities are almost four times more likely to be victims of abuse and neglect than children without disabilities. A 1993 study by the Office of Child Abuse and Neglect found that 36 percent of the substantiated cases of child maltreatment, or about 300,000 children, caused disabilities in those children. Near-fatal child maltreatment leaves 18,000 children permanently disabled each year. Identification and treatment of the medical, development and mental health problems of children have been shown to decrease the amount of time a child spends in out of home placement and increase chances for a stable living situation. Unfortunately, less than half of the children who are abused or neglected receive any services at all.

To address these gaps in service, the bill requires the state child welfare system to develop policies and procedures involving abused or neglected children under the age of 3 to be referred to the statewide early intervention system funded under Part C of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. Such policies and procedures will ensure that abused children can access the early intervention services and supports for which they are eligible. Such services will help these children learn, grow and thus enter school ready to learn.

Related to this issue is the importance of health screenings and treatment for children who are victims of child abuse and neglect. Children in the child welfare system are at higher risk for health problems than other children for a variety of reasons, including risks for child maltreatment are also risks of child health problems and because child abuse often causes disabilities. Appropriate health and development evaluations and treatment can greatly influence healthy child development and can affect treatment and family preservation, such as preventing the need for out-of-home placements. A 1995 GAO study concluded that systemic and direct service barriers prevent many children in the welfare system from receiving adequate health care. H.R. 3989 takes many steps to help states address this problem and improve services for victims of child abuse and neglect by promoting linkages between child protection and health care (including mental health) agencies.

Improving the child protective service system (CPS) infrastructure

H.R. 3839 recognizes that CAPTA can fill an important role in the federal response to protecting children and preventing child maltreatment. To this end, H.R. 3839 adds to the permitted uses of the basic state grants to enable states to improve their CPS systems, through CAPTA grant support, in a variety of activities essential to a responsive, efficient and appropriate protective service system. In addition to the purposes for basic state grants in current law which address CPS improvements, H.R. 3839 allows CAPTA funds to be available to address the following issues:

CPS staffing: to improve upon the supervision of casework in CPS; to enhance the recruitment and retention of child protection workers; and to promote training for child protective service work.

Case management: to promote on-going case monitoring and service delivery; to enhance the ability to assess cases; to improve upon the management of case information; and to help states develop better databases for information.

Linkages: to promote partnerships between CPS and private, community-based services; and to develop connections with health, education and juvenile justice services to better serve abused and neglected children.

Public education: to improve upon the public's understanding about the role and responsibilities of CPS; and to inform the public about appropriate reporting of suspected incidents of child maltreatment.

Our nation's current system of protecting children is heavily weighted toward protecting children who have been so seriously maltreated they are no longer safe at home and must be placed in foster care or adoptive homes. These are children whose safety is in danger; they demand our immediate attention. Unfortunately, far less attention is directed at preventing harm to these children from happening in the first place, or providing the appropriate services and treatment needed by families and children victimized by abuse or neglect. Through the changes made by H.R. 3839, CAPTA can serve to assist in the improvement of the CPS infrastructure. Through the CAPTA basic state grant program, the federal government has the opportunity to step up to a leadership role in providing support for the CPS system infrastructure and to begin to rectify the imbalance in the federal government's response to the abuse and neglect of children.
